Kelly: Have you read the news about the Ciné Prize nominations?

Eunice: Yeah. I can't believe Took Off got the most nominations. It's not that good.

Kelly: Please! It's the best movie of the year! The actors are great, and the story is wonderful. Tony Baker is so great in it! I believe he will finally win the Best Actor this time.

Eunice: Well, I like Hugh Wayne better. He's so cute in Morning Star.

Kelly: He's lucky enough to get the nomination. But a pretty face can only get him so far.

Eunice: At least Morning Star is selling more tickets than Took Off!

Kelly: OK. Let's not talk about Wayne. Who do you think will win the Best Actress?

Eunice: Julia Adams, that's for sure! She's really the star in Roses. Even Laura Harper does not shine as much. Before this movie, I thought no one else was better than Laura.

Kelly: I'm glad we're on the same page about this. Many people think Julia does very well in Roses, and she has become the talk of the Internet these days. I'm sure she'll be the winner!

Lingua Today

There are about 6,000-7,000 languages spoken in the world. However, almost one language dies every two weeks. It means many languages are getting near the end of their lives. Take Navajo for example. It is one of the languages spoken by the native people of North America. Today, more and more Navajo children grow up learning and speaking only English. Most of them do not even know what the 3,000-year-old Navajo language sounds like.

Chart 1 below shows that from 1980 to 1990, the percentage (%) of young Navajos (Age: 5-17) who speak only English grew quickly. Chart 2 shows that in 1992, many Navajo children under the age of six spoke English well, but not many of them spoke their parents' language well. Clearly, the Navajo language may soon be lost if we don't do something about it.

Chart 1

Year	The % of young Navajos (Age: 5-17) who speak only English
1980	~12%
1990	~28%

Chart 2

Language	The % of Navajo children (under 6) who could speak Navajo or English well in 1992
Navajo	~35%
English	~75%
