Dear Sir,

I ordered a shirt from you last month. But there are some problems with it. First, the color is not as read as shown in the catalogue. I understand that the picture does not always show the real color, but it should not be that different. Second, I asked for a medium size because it is the size I usually wear. But your medium is so small that I have to give it to my younger brother.

I think you should be more serious about your business.

Truly,
Adam Rosen

Dear Mr. Rosen,

Thank you for telling us the problems with your order. We hope we can give you better service. We are sending you another shirt with this letter. It is size large, and its red color is brighter than the one you had. We hope you like it.

Our office hours are 9:00 a.m. – 5:00 p.m. Please call us if you have any more questions.

Yours truly,
Victor Smith

Susan was a woman who hated animals. She never wanted to keep any pets at home. To her, all animals were dirty and boring. Susan could never understand why people would like to have cats or dogs in the house. It was so stupid!

Last month Susan's daughter, Penny, came home from school with a mouse in a box. Susan was very angry. But Penny said that it was her homework. Her teacher asked each student to take care of an animal and learn to get along with it. Susan had to say yes.

It was fun for Penny at the beginning, but then she got lazy and forgot to do her homework. It became Susan's homework. She gave it food and water every day and found that the mouse was in fact not dirty. She even talked to it! It was not boring or stupid! Now Susan is having a good time with "her" mouse. She named it Nini. And she is going to buy another one to make a pair.

Diana: Here we are at the Grand Shopping Center.

Bruce: Great! There are so many things I'd like to see.

Diana: It will be fun for you, but not for me.

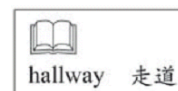

Bruce: Come on. I'm sure you can enjoy yourself when I'm shopping.

Diana: OK, OK. I'll wait for you at Jones' Coffee House. Is three hours enough for you?

Bruce: I think so. But where's the coffee shop?

Diana: just go along this hallway and you will see a snack shop. Take a right turn, and the coffee shop is at the end of the hallway. Remember to come meet me at 4 p.m., please.

Bruce: Sure! Grand shopping Center, here I come!

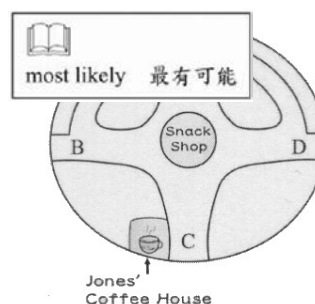

( B ) 36. What can we learn from the conversation?

I was jogging with my dog this morning when I saw John Archer at a street corner. He was sitting on a bike with one of his feet on the ground. "He's waiting for someone," I thought. John and I were both in the ninth grade. He was a basketball player on our school team and was very popular with many girls. But I never talked to him before. He was not my type.

John saw me, too. He smiled. For a moment I thought he was smiling at someone else. But he was not. "Hi, Mary Jones," he said to me. "You have a cute little dog." I smiled but did not say anything, because I did not know what to say. "I'm here waiting for you. Would you... would you like to go to the movies with me?" he asked. I was very surprised. I never thought he would do this, and I never thought about going out with him.

I said "no," of course. But he seemed nice and friendly. Maybe I would go to watch him play basketball some day.
